Papers

Political Economy of Canada, Summer 2015

POLS 3125, York University

- Realist approach of US is challenged. U.S military power is overstretched and is struggling to multitask because of debt crisis; Iran, China, Russia, North Korea, Venezuela, India, and Saudi Arabia, are detrimental to U.S hegemony in the global scene.
- Military adventures and their negative effect on the national debt level was examined in conjunction with the U.S growing poverty rate to illustrate how the debt crisis is damaging the social fabric internally. Military option is no longer effective and economic tools are losing significance also, like previous empires, the U.S hegemony is out of breath.
- Emergence of new constellation of power relationships in the World is undermining the realist theory which has been the main pillar of the United States' policies; B+.

2004 Indian Ocean Tsunami; How It Could Be Mitigated, Fall 2014

ENVS 4440, York University

- The failure of the effected countries in providing adequate public education as to how to deal with such scenarios, lack of a proper warning system to alert residents and the crowds of an impending danger, and cooperation of international and local aid agencies are the main reasons behind the high casualty rate in the 2004 Indian ocean earthquake and tsunami.
- A large-scale natural disaster that affects several countries simultaneously requires analysis of many factors that contribute to high number of causalities and/or a reduced number. The states cooperation prior and post-disaster was studied as well as the social fabric of affected countries as means to better illustrate the complexity of the incident in international relation realm.
- Main reasons behind the massive devastation of 2004 Indian Ocean Tsunami were the result of lack of cooperation and integration among developing countries and the developed countries (ex. Japan and U.S), no public education about the pending hazard, and the geographical factors.; A

Imperialism and Capitalism; A Fading Relationship (instead of position), Fall 2014

AP POLS 4292, York University

- Market and state hold no supremacy over one another and the two have become one contrary to popular belief: and Imperialism leads to partial development in dependent countries contradictory to the old black and white perception.
- Issue was examined by drawing on the theories from Global North, Global South as well as neutral observers to provide a thorough picture then personal analysis was structured around data extracted from the U.S. Department of Commerce, World Databank, and International Monetary Fund. Charts were also provided to help the audience better comprehend the transformation of trends and norms through time.
- Imperialism's link to capitalism faded since the collapse of the Berlin wall and borders were becoming something of the past, but with incidents of past decade, states have started forming new economic and military unions, a resurgence of imperialism; B+.
